

Vassilis Triantafyllou

Vassilis Triantafyllou obtained his diploma and PhD from the Computer Engineering department of the University of Patras. Currently, he is a professor of the Electrical and Computer engineering Department of the University of Peloponnese.

He has a significant administrative experience:

- Head of Research Unit 6, Computer Technology institute (1998-2001)
- Head of the Computer and Telecommunications Dpt. Of Technological Educational Institutes (TEI) Western Greece. (2004-20015)
- Member of the Research Committee of the TEI WG (2004-2015)
- Rector of TEI WG (2015-12019)
- President of the General Assembly of Rectors of TEI (2017 – 2019)
- Head of the Network Technologies and Digital Transformation Lab , ECE Department, University of Peloponnese (2020 – today)

His has participated as a researcher and as scientific director in over 40 national (PAVE, RIS3, Cooperation 2006, 2011) and European funded projects (ESPRIT, HORIZON, ERASMUS).

His Educational experience extents over 30 years in Higher Education both in Undergraduate and postgraduate level in Computer Engineering and Informatics departments in the field of Computer Network Technologies.

His research work includes includes 55 research articles in refereed conferences and journals, 2 book chapters and have received over 350 citations. He is also participated as scientific committee in numerous conference for e-learning, e-society and Sensors.

His current research interests include design and development of networking applications, theoretical and practical aspects of e-democracy (deliberation, voting etc.) and e-government, IoT and sensor network applications.